Free Upgrade Period

OpenQM licences include a minimum of one year of free upgrades. This can be extended by a further nine years (total ten years) for a small surcharge on the licence price as shown above. The upgrade period can be extended at any time, even after expiry but extensions are from the previous expiry date.

Surcharges for all options shown below are calculated from the one year upgrade entitlement base price regardless of whether the extended upgrade entitlement option is included.

Device Licensing

Device licensing allows multiple connections from a single client share a QM licence. This feature is available at a small surcharge on the base licence price for use with QMConsole, AccuTerm, Winnix, QMTerm and QMClient. Three options are available: two sessions per licence (20%), four sessions per licence (40%) and eight sessions per licence (60%).

Licence Changes

Increasing the number of users within the free upgrade period is charged pro-rata for the complete or part years remaining. There is normally no charge for moving the licence to a different system.

Standby Licences

Permanent licences can include a second system used only as a standby in case the primary system should fail. The standby system licence must be identical to the primary licence and is charged at 20% of the normal fee.
